

Negrito, Visayan, Igorrote, Bagobo, Lanao and Samal Moro Villages Contain Interesting Examples of Human Development—Generally Believed That the Natives of "Our Islands" Are, With One Exception, of Malay Descent, Though Some Hold That They Are of Aryan Origin.

THE VISAYANS AND THE TAGALOGS.
The Visayans and the Tagalogs are the highest types of the people of the Philippine Islands. They are very much alike in appearance, manner and customs. However, each tribe speaks a different dialect. From their long-continued association with the Spaniards they have inherited their faith and their manner of living. They are very intelligent and learn very rapidly. They are very energetic, more regular and show the refining influence of civilization. They are the aristocrats of the islands. They wear a gray and a dignified bearing and resent intermingling with other people. They bear the gaze of the world with a calm and steady clarity. They are loyal to America and are eagerly availing themselves of the opportunities of the new era. They are orderly and industrious. They are especially tall as many of them have a military aptitude. They can pick up almost any man and play any kind of an instrument. They are staunch Catholics in faith and they are very devout.

The Visayans are the merchants, manufacturers and business people of their towns, while the Tagalogs are the traders and laborers. They are very skillful with the needle and every woman is taught to make her own clothing.

The "World's Fair grounds is an interesting one. In this one race of people one can find the elements of all that is being the intelligence and in physique.

Studying the codes of living of the different races of the world, we can understand the physical nature as well as the mental.

"The Wisconsin building itself, which contains no exhibits and is meant simply as a home for the people of the State, is so happily situated, designed and managed that it will stay in the memory of thousands to whom exhibits make no appeal."

tion No. 12, on Adams street, Tuesday. It is problematical whether the number will remain in effect during the remainder of the term of the Exposition but if it does not, it will not be because the Mining Gulch exhibitors were insistent enough in their demands for a change.

No. 491 North Broadway yesterday afternoon. An ambulance was summoned, but the man died before the South Side Dispensary was reached. He was about 2 years old and poorly clad.

Persons who have bills against the board complain that they have been compelled to wait more than a month for a settlement, and they are eagerly awaiting the celebration. Captain J. M. Osborne, who is in charge of the three registers at the building, said yesterday that the total registration for the week would be between 25,000 and 40,000.

said he played the pin game and won, but the man who run the game demanded that he show his money before he was paid. Todd showed $16, which, he says, was taken from him.
